

Consumers should be allowed number portability. It exists on land lines with no apparent consequences, and portable companies already have the hardware/software in place. To not do so would be a dis-service to consumers